Volume IV, No. 1

BONDUEL, WISCONSIN

October 1961

THIS PAPER IS DEDICATED

MR. GROVE

Mr. Stanley E. Grove (he would not disclose his middle name to me) is a native of Waupaca. He has one younger brother and one older sister. He attended both grade school and high school there. He attended Oshkosh State Teacher's College where he majored in chemistry. He has a minor in English.

He likes all sports especially hunting, fishing and baseball. He also likes to read magazines. His favorite foods are steak and pizza and his favorite color is brown?!!!

Bonduel has exceeded his expectations of a small town. The high school is definitely far above average for a town of this size.

The students are cooperative and ambitious for the most part but tend to get a little noisy once in awhile. He believes, however, that this stems from ambition so therefore he does not believe it is such a bad trait. He teaches chemistry and general science and math.

He left us the 15th of October. He is in the 32nd Division and has been called to active duty. He and our faculty have high hopes of his joining us the second semester or most certainly next year. I'm sure that all the students and faculty of Bonduel will miss Mr. Grove and we are sincerely hoping he will come back as soon as possible.

The Sophomore class held its first meeting on September 11, with Nancy Hoeffs, last years president, presiding. We elected officers for the '61-62' school year as follows: Billy Reaths, President; Leon Drage, Vice President; Judy Westphal, Secretary; Sharon Lotto, Treasurer; and Carol Marohl will represent the class on the Student Council.

At the present time we are planning the float for the homecoming parade. Peter Carrol was chosen by the football team and then chose Barbara Tuma to represent the class with him on the Homecoming Court.

We are also starting to plan for the initiation of the freshmen.

STAFF

Mr Robert Badzinski comes to us from Thorp, Wisconsin, a town of about 1500, which is west of here.

He comes from quite a large family, six sisters and two brothers. He went to grade school and high school in Thorp and after graduating, attended Renir Falls college for one year. He then served four years in the navy. He finished the remaining three years of college at Stout Institute graduating this past spring. He has a major in industrial arts, and a minor in speech-English and Social Science. Here in Bonduel he teaches Auto-Mechanics, Electricity and Metals.

When I asked him of there were any special hobbies or interests he had, he told me hunting and fishing, which most teachers do, chess, and listening to music. He has many of the records of Broadway show tunes and also enjoys the classics. One more thing he is also a loyal Packer fan.

When asked for some opinions he held of Bonduel, the school and the students, he explained that he had not been here long and so could be wrong in some of his opinions. The people of Bonduel, he finds to be quite friendly as his fellow faculty members are. The students are fairly well disciplined. He also hopes to improve the facilities for his courses. They are new subjects since last year and he hopes to improve the equipment and the course.

Oh! by the way girls, he is single, not fussy about the food he eats, and his favorite color is blue.

Music News

This year our music department has a new and charming teacher, Miss Oberli.

She has two Girl's Glee clubs and one mixed chorus. Every seventh hour the freshman and sophomore Glee club meets. The junior and senior Glee club meets every third hour on Tuesday and Thursday. Altogether there are 57 members in the two Girl's Glee clubs. Because of the lack of brave souls among the boys, no mixed chorus of freshman and sophomores was formed. Every third hour on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday junior and senior mixed chorus can be heard raising their 39 voices in song.

Both mixed chorus and the two Glee clubs have started working on songs for the Christmas concert which will be given on December 21st.

Lynda Joy Jensen has been chosen as the representative for the Student Council from mixed chorus. Lenore Senzig was chosen as the representative from Girl's Glee club.

Miss Oberli reports that new members of either group are always welcome.

If you have looked into the music room lately, you will notice that the room has been arranged differently.

Junior Class News

Well, the best class in high school has been pretty busy these first weeks of school.

Thanks to our active president, Shirley, and others, on September 29 we sponsored a record hop after our Bears beat Marion. Mr. Grove did an excellent job spinning the records for us. This first school dance and the D.J. -- a real success and lots of fun!

A little yellow dog was seen floating around school. One lucky person is now the owner of it. This dog was the symbol of our magazine sales campaign.

If you wondered who the young man with money rattling in his pockets is, it's our treasurer, Jim Sager. Junior class members, remember to get those round, flat pieces of silver, (commonly called fifty cent pieces or half dollars) into that pocket of his.

Ann Johnson, our secretary, was pretty busy with our magazine sales campaign. She had the job of being our sale manager. We'd like to thank her and also Sandy and Donna.

Our Vice-president, Wayne Schultz, as of yet, hasn't had any real work connected with his office. He assured us that he's keeping himself quite busy. What does he mean by that??? Hmmm.

Ken Rudie is our representative in the Student Council. He will give our Class's say in school matters.

Yes, we Juniors are a pretty busy lot!

F. H. A. News

The new officers are: Karen Dobratz, president; Diana Cagle, vice-president; Sue Fleigle, secretary; Marlene Boerst, treasurer; Cheryl Zernicke, parliamentarian; Donna Bonnin, reporter; Janet Klosterman, historian; and Shirley Horn, Student Council representative.

Our goal for the year is "Getting to Know You" which includes getting to know more about F. H. A., our own community, and other F. H. A. chapters.

Freshman Class

On September 11th, we elected our class officers. On top of the heap is Arnie Pitt as president. Ron Rosenow backs him up as the vice president. If you wonder why Preston Porter is spending so much time practicing penmanship, it's because he has to write out the secretary's report of the last meeting. Handling all money problems is Judy Treptow, treasurer. In the Student Council Carol Strupp represents the Freshmen. At the Homecoming Ron Rosenow and his partner Barb Rankin did a wonderful job of representing us. The theme of our Homecoming float was "Pepper the Comets". The members of the float committee were Leah Berkhahn, Barb Rankin, Marilyn Hoeffs, Mary Sumnicht, Don Voorhees, John Roloff, Glen Dirks, Dennis Juedes, and the officers. We're all settled real well into the school "drag"! In fact-strange as it may seem-we even like going to school since it's at B.H.S!!!

NEW TEACHERS ADDED TO STAFF

The newest addition to the Music Department at Bonduel High was born at Tomahawk, Wisconsin, which is a small town a short distance from Merrill. Since that time, Miss Mary Ellen Oberli has lived in Merrill. There she went to Holy Cross High School, which is an all girls school. She didn't have the problem of clothes that the girls here at Bonduel have though; because she, along with all the other girls, was entitled to wear blue uniforms, nylons, and dark brown shoes. After she graduated from high school, Miss Oberli attended the Dominican College in Racine for two years. Then she transferred to the University of Wisconsin in Madison and from there she received her Bachelor of Music degree when she graduated last August. Now she is engaged to Mr. Mike Holly a student at the university of Wisconsin. He is working on his Masters Degree in Electrical Engineering and is also a part-time instructor there.

Because Miss Oberli is a music teacher and is acquainted with all types of songs and music, I asked her what her favorite songs and styles of music were. I found out that she doesn't have one specific song that is her favorite and that she likes all types of music---ranging from pop to classical. If she really had to make a choice though, she would choose classical.

Her favorite hobby; which is closely related with music, is dancing. Once again Miss Oberli likes all styles; this includes Rock 'n Roll! Her favorite color is blue and her favorite spectator sports are football and basketball. As for favorite foods, she likes popcorn with lots of salt and butter, and banana splits.

She likes Bonduel and its students very much and thinks that the students are friendly but she does say, "It's so quiet compared to Madison!"

This is Miss Mary Behling or new Home Economics teacher. She is also the Freshman class and the F. H. A. advisor.

Miss Behling comes to us from Menominee, Wisconsin. She is a graduate of Stout State College and has minors in Social Science, English, and Speech.

Miss Behling enjoys teaching here. She likes the community and the school and the beautiful country surrounding Bonduel. Her "pet" peeves" are students who talk, and pass notes in her classes.

Her favorite past times are cooking and sewing. She is a great basketball fan. Brown and green are her favorite colors and her favorite clothes are plain and simple. The food she likes best is shrimp.

Miss Joy Seering, a former student at Bonduel, has now become a member of the teaching staff here. Her high school classes include German, English, and World History, and she enjoys teaching all of them. However, if she were to choose her favorite subject to teach, it would be poetry.

After graduating from Bonduel High, Miss Seering attended Lawrence College and later graduated from West Texas State College. She also did graduate work at the University of Wisconsin and now has a major in English and a minor in German and history. As you can see from the schools she attended, Miss Seering has traveled quite a bit throughout the country. Now she's dreaming of traveling to Europe during a summer vacation.

After a very full day of teaching, Miss Seering relaxes by listening to classical music and by reading. Right now she enjoys books of philosophy and religion.

When questioned about our high school and how it compares with the school when she attended it, she feels that Bonduel is almost a completely new and improved school. The students, she feels, are quite responsive. Being an alumnus has given her the advantage of knowing now to pronounce our names and it has also enabled her to work with a staff of teachers, some of whom have been her own instructors.

We welcome Miss Seering back to Bonduel High and hope that she finds her work pleasant here "on the other side of the desk."

Homecoming

We began the celebration of our homecoming with a parade led by BHS cheerleaders at 2:40, Friday, October 20. The winning floats were: First prize-$5.00, Sophomore class; Second prize-$3.00, Junior class; Third prize-$1.00, G.A.A.

A pep meeting was held on the football bleachers following the crowning of the Homecoming Queen, Judy Radloff by the King, Randy Duwe.

Mr. Carl Blom presented the Queen with a bouquet of flowers and reporters from the Green Bay Press Gazette took several colored pictures of the court.

The Bears won the homecoming game with the Waupaca Comets with a score of 42-13.

The homecoming dance began at 10:00 with the music by Harold Ferron and his orchestra. Admission prices were: $1.25 for couples, $.75 for singles and $.50 for spectators. The grand march took place at about 11:00.

Class representatives on the court of honor were: Seniors-Sandra Nischke and Lyle Gehm, Juniors-Patsy Kohn and John Dingeldein, Sophomores-Barbara Tuma and Peter Carroll, and Freshmen-Barbara Rankin and Ronald Rosenow.

The gym was decorated with pumpkins, small trees, corn stalks, rail fences, and paper leaves. The theme, "Indian Summer" was spelled out with bright colored leaves on the front of the stage. The most striking part of the decorations was a huge, flaming, crepe paper sunset, on the wall opposite the stage, with its rays turning from a dark orange to a deep purple.

Punch was served for refreshments.

What Is Intelligence?

Many people still think of intelligence as something all of a piece--something that some lucky souls have a lot of while others have only a little. Research, however, has shown that intelligence is not one thing, but a combination of several different abilities tied up in a package that is labeled intelligence.

Fay's package, for example, may have a lot of one kind of ability--we'll call it Brand B at the moment--and smaller amounts of other kinds. Kay, on the other hand, may have an ample amount of X, but very little B. Fay and Kay may have the same intelligence quotient--or IQ, as it is commonly called--and yet have very different skills and talents. That's one reason why someone may be outstanding as a salesman, judge, or journalist but be unable to do accurate long division or use a hammer.

Of course, there is infinite variety in the intelligence packages, which come in all sizes and shapes. Then too, since abilities tend to strengthen each other, it makes a difference what particular combination of abilities a package contains.

After much testing and research, psychologists have identified a number of different or primary mental abilities. One of these, called the space factor, is the ability to visualize objects in space. (This ability is what enables a youngster to judge ahead of time that there's not enough room for him to ride his tricycle between the coffee table and the sofa.) Although most people who are intelligent are fairly well supplied with the space factor, some highly intelligent people are quite lacking in this primary mental ability.

Another primary ability is called the number factor. People who rate high in this do extremely well at simple arithmetic problems. Oddly enough, however, this ability doesn't help much in mathematical reasoning. Thus a successful mathematician might be fairly poor in the number factor, but a cashier would certainly lose his job unless he were fairly good in it.

Because so much of learning depends on it, one of the important primary mental abilities is verbal comprehension. Those with a good deal of this ability do well in tests of vocabulary or in tests that require them to interpret proverbs or to understand difficult prose.

Another verbal factor is word fluency. This involves producing words according to instructions rather than understanding them. A simple test for word fluency is to ask someone to write as many boy's names (or girls' names of words beginning with ch) as he can think of in a few minutes. Some people can dash off a long list with ease while others have a terrible time.

Verbal comprehension and word fluency are different mental abilities in the sense that one person may talk very fluently even though he has a limited vocabulary, and someone else may understand complicated prose and have a large vocabulary even though he has almost no talent for expressing himself in words.

It will come as no news that some of us have good memories and others have poor ones. The ability to memorize doesn't have much connection with the other primary abilities--that is, someone who has a good memory may or may not be blessed with other primary abilities.

There appear to be several distinct kinds of memory abilities. For example, there seems to be difference between the ability to memorize intentionally--a list of historical dates, let's say--and the individual's ability to recall casual past experiences that he has had.

One of the most interesting of the primary mental abilities is induction. This is the ability to discover the underlying rule or principle in the material that one is working with. We do not know yet whether this ability is associated with creativeness.

The primary abilities are detected in all young people, ranging from kindergarten to college students. Just about the same abilities are found at the different ages, although some of the abilities develop much sooner than other. For instance, the space and number factors mature rather early while verbal comprehension matures rather late.

Experiments are being carried on to try to find out whether children with certain combinations of primary mental abilities can learn to read more easily than others. If this is found to be the case, then other experiments will be carried on to find out if (and how) the way we teach reading should vary depending on the combination of abilities that a child has.

The primary abilities, some (but not all) of which have been discussed in this article, can be developed by training. However, if two children who differ in one of the primary abilities drilled for 100 hours in that ability, the more gifted child would almost certainly improve more than the less gifted one. Both of them would no doubt improve, but the difference in their ability would probably be greater after practice than before.

Are the primary mental abilities inherited? There is more or less general agreement that they are, but the environment that a child grows up in and the strength of his desire to do well have a good deal of influence on how effectively he uses his abilities. Of course, no amount of opportunity and encouragement will produce outstanding results in someone who has inherited very little mental ability from his ancestors.

When we have discovered a child's primary abilities, we have a picture of what we refer to as his mental profile. Students often choose careers in keeping with their mental profiles. For example, youngsters whose profiles are highest in the several verbal abilities are usually interested in some such occupation as writing or journalism. Sometimes, a mental profile shows an outstanding ability which the student had no idea he possessed.

The mental profile is useful in advising students about choosing an occupation. It should be used with discretion, however, because people sometimes become outstanding in a field even though their mental profile indicates that they do not have special abilities for it.

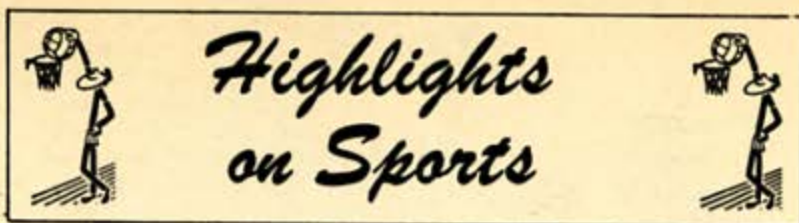

Clearly, it is much more useful for the school to know what each student's mental profile is than to know merely what his IQ is. So far, we have barely started to obtain the information that we need to have about intelligence, although our present knowledge enables us to do a good deal better job of judging mental abilities than was possible twenty years ago. Undoubtedly, more primary abilities will be identified and some of the conclusions we have reached may have to be changed. Eventually, additional information should make us quite skilled when planning the best possible education for each child and in selecting the right people for each kind of work.

The Future Teachers

The Future Teachers of America held their organizational meeting in the high school library on October 2. Five of last year's members returned and one new member, Mrs. Trusdale, advisor, presided over the meeting until we elected our new officers. They are as follows: President-Lenore Sanzig; Vice-President-Judy Westphal; Secretary-Carolyn Leisner; Treasurer-Judy Gehm; Historian-Suzi Winkler; Parliamentarian-Martha Swanson. Judy Westphal also is the representative on the Student Council.

Since the membership was so small, it was decided that we would have a membership drive. Martha Swanson and Suzi Winkler were appointed to make invitations and issue them to anyone they thought would possibly be interested. A special meeting will be held October 16, when these guests will be entertained with a short meeting explaining the aims and purposes of the club, followed by a movie and a lunch.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE

BASKETBALL

This year on October 30, basketballs will be bouncing on gym floors all over Wisconsin and Bonduel is no exception.

This year's season under new head coach, Mr. Kroll, and assistant coach Mr. Niles, proves to be one of interest. What this year's squad is headed for, remains to be seen as the season progresses.

Lettermen returning from last year's squad include, Gary Hovey, Charles Herb, Randy Duwe, Dean Gueller, Lyle Gehm, and Bill Brecken.

Along with a hopeful squad of others, this team can be expected to play hard all season long, and worthy of all the support the rest of the school and all other fans can master.

This year Bonduel had a very good football team which suffered many heartbreaking setbacks during the year.

All year long the Bears had penalties called on them which resulted in touchdowns being called back, or which resulted in drives being halted at key points in the game.

In the Pulaski, Weyawega, and Wittenberg games Bonduel lost by one-touchdown scores. In these games we either had touchdowns called back or we lost the ball within the five yard line without scoring.

Also in the games we won we beat our opponents more decisively than the score indicated. We had almost as many points called back as we scored.

This all goes to prove that we have a team we can respect and stand behind, knowing that we have a team equal to or better than any in the area.

This group of fellows can be expected to go out on the field Friday night, and show the Comets from Waupaca that they are a team to be reckoned with.

This year on October 30, basketballs will be bouncing on gym floors all over Wisconsin and Bonduel is no exception.

This year's season under new head coach, Mr. Kröll, and assistant coach Mr. Niles, proves to be one of interest. What this year's squad is headed for, remains to be seen as the season progresses.

Lettermen returning from last year's squad include, Gary Hovey, Charles Herb, Randy Duwe, Dean Gueller, Lyle Gehm, and Bill Brecken.

Along with a hopeful squad of others, this team can be expected to play hard all season long, and worthy of all the support the rest of the school and all other fans can master.
